Urban Renewal Program records. -- 1949-2005. -- 3.50 Cubic feet (7 boxes)

Scope and Content

The collection consists of materials pertaining to urban redevelopment, urban renewal, and community development projects, especially that of mixed-income communities, and programs created by the Housing Act of 1949, the Housing Act of 1954, and the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974. The collection includes program materials of specific efforts which involved Atlanta Housing, including The Atlanta Project (TAP), an initiative begun in 1992 by President Jimmy Carter and the Carter Center to create a coordinated effort for assisting disadvantaged families in the Atlanta area. During the process of Urban Renewal, Atlanta Housing began documenting the urban renewal projects and construction of new public housing communities through photographs, which are included in this collection.

HISTORICAL NOTE:

The City of Atlanta delegated its urban redevelopment powers to Atlanta Housing in September 1955. The implementation of the urban redevelopment program was delayed however when the Georgia Redevelopment Law adopted in 1946 was declared unconstitutional. In 1959, a constitutional amendment permitted Atlanta Housing to then begin the process of urban renewal. The goal of the Atlanta Urban Renewal Program was to eliminate slums and blighted conditions in designated areas of the City of Atlanta.

Atlanta Housing acquired and cleared the blighted areas, and then sold the land to private enterprises for new development. Atlanta Housing also helped the owners to upgrade, improve or rehabilitate their properties by providing financial and technical assistance. Other assistance included the provision for new schools and parks, roads, streets, sidewalks and sewers in the revitalized areas, as well as developed new low rent housing units. Private investors developed new residential and office buildings, hotels and commercial centers. Homeowners made necessary repairs and cleaned up their properties. On January 31, 1981 urban redevelopment powers were transferred from Atlanta Housing to the City of Atlanta.

Scope and Content

AHA 2013.00581. "June 2, 1965. Butler Street Project. A view of the Butler Street Urban Redevelopment Project in 1957 as prepared by the Atlanta Journal. This aerial photo of the entire Butler Street area was made in 1957 and points out the vast number of houses, but does not in any way show the slum and blighted conditions that existed."

AHA 2013.00582. "June 1, 1965. Aerial - Butler Street Project - 1959. Looking southeast from the intersection of Forrest Avenue and Courtland Street, the crowded conditions in existence before the Butler Street Project was developed can be seen. Clearance for the downtown connector was well under way by 1959 and may be noted extending from the foreground through the upper right hand corner of this view. One of Atlanta's largest luxury motels, the Heart of Atlanta, can be see at right center and the Genuine Parts Warehouse at left center. It will be noted that at this time Piedmont Avenue and Baker Street had been severed and the bridge has not been begun."

AHA 2013.00583. "June 1, 1965. Atlanta, Georgia. Aerial of the Atlanta Central Business District viewed looking west with the Butler Street Project (Ga. R-9) in the foreground. The apartment development in the foreground is the church sponsored Wheat Street Gardens 221 (d)(3) project which will cover most of the vacant land north to the East Expressway. Beyond the expressway in the curve of the interchange can be seen the John Hancock Building. The vacant land beyond the John Hancock Building will be occupied by Citizen's Trust Company and a Ford Motor Company display room. To the right of this development can be seen the 11 story Marriott Motor Hotel, the 300 unit Holiday Inn Motel, the 21 story Landmark Apartments, and the 7 story Oxford Manufacturing Company. These developments alone in the Butler Street Project were constructed at a cost of $21,191,000 and return in taxes more than $350,000 per year or 5 times the taxes originally paid by the entire project before redevelopment."
