

AH-Owned Residential Communities

Currently, AH owns five (5) public housing-assisted residential properties, including three (3) senior high-rise communities and two (2) small family communities. Residents of the high-rise communities are elderly (age 62 or older), near elderly (age 55-61), and non-elderly disabled adults.

Under AH’s site-based and private property management business model, AH contracts with third-party professional property management and development firms to manage each community in a comprehensive manner in accordance with AH’s goals, policies, and financial resources. Site-based administration includes the daily property operations, physical maintenance, and capital improvements. As well as, screening applicants for new admissions, lease enforcement, and providing quality resident services.

These communities are located throughout the city of Atlanta, and managed by three private management companies:
